

Jim Pavia

Money Editor
CNBC Digital

Jim Pavia is the money editor at CNBC. He oversees the personal finance and financial advisor-related news coverage for CNBC digital, with a focus on long-term investment strategies and planning. Prior to CNBC, Pavia was at InvestmentNews for 10 years. He served as editor-in-chief for 8 years before being promoted to editorial director. He has won multiple national writing awards, including three from the American Society of Business Publication Editors, for “Editorial Excellence in Editorial/Column writing.” Pavia was the 2014 recipient of the Malcolm S. Forbes Public Awareness Award for Excellence in Advancing Financial Understanding Among the Public, which is awarded by the Financial Planning Association (NY Chapter). He is also a guest lecturer for the Dow Jones News Fund’s national foundation, which promotes careers in business journalism.

Twitter: @jimpavia