

Caleb Silver

Editor-in-Chief, Investopedia

Board of Governors and Executive Committee, SABEW (Society for Advancing Business Editing & Writing)

Caleb Silver began his career producing wildlife documentaries in South America and the American southwest. His career in business news began at Bloomberg, where he worked as a senior television producer and was nominated for a 2003 Emmy Award.

Caleb then joined CNN, serving as a Senior Producer for The Situation Room with Wolf Blitzer, as well as the Executive Producer of CNNMoney.com. Caleb and his team at CNNMoney were nominated for an Emmy Award for New Approaches to Business & Financial Reporting. He then returned to CNN as the Director of US business news.

Caleb left CNN in 2014 to form Frog Pond Productions, a digital production and consulting company, and then joined Investopedia in January 2016 as the VP of Content. He also serves as the treasurer of the executive board of the Society for Advancing Business Editing and Writing.

Caleb is frequently featured as a markets, economic and consumer trends expert on NBC, MSNBC, ABC Radio, Marketplace Radio and Cheddar TV, in addition to markets commentary in his daily newsletters. His other awards include a Peabody, EPPY, and SABEW Best in Business. He received his Bachelor of Arts in art and art history from Colgate University, and his Master of Arts in journalism at New York University.

Quote from Caleb Silver:

"Charlie Munger, who runs Berkshire Hathaway with Warren Buffett, once told me that he has no patience in life for people who don't have the capacity to change. I think about this as an investor and as an editor every day. The world changes, and history rarely repeats itself in the investing and finance realms. Every situation and era is unique, and we need to be able to adapt as investors if we want to realize our goals."

Social Media:

Twitter: @calebsilver

LinkedIn: <https://www.linkedin.com/in/caleb-silver-9639585/>